THE GUNDAGAI CASE.

WITH reference to the strictures which have appeared in our columns on the Governor' decision in this case, Captain Perry, the place for the site of a township. The dis-Deputy Surveyor-General, has addressed trict Surveyor is particularly instructed to to us the following observations—and it is only fair to add, he has addressed them spontaneously, without communication with His Excellency.

As considerable importance seems to be attached to an expression of the Governor's, relative to an unlucky selection of allotments in the town of Gundagai, I deem it but a matter of justice to his Excellency to state that Bir George Gipps had nothing whatever to do with the laying out of that town, the whole arrangements connected with it having been made by me prior to Sir George's arrival in this colony, as will appear by the following extracts from my instructions to the surveyors who had been ordered to proceed to Port Phillip:—

(EXTRACT) with His Excellency.

Phillip:—

(EXTEACT)

"Surveyor-General's Office,

"You will then proceed by the Post-office route, with the whole of your party and equirment, to a station on the Murrumbidgee, where Mr. Broderipp has established a punt, and near to which Mr. Hutchinson has an establishment, At this station you will halt and encamp your party, while you are completing the arrangements for the rest of your journey." "During this halt, you will employ yoursed in making a detached survey of the features of the ground on both sides of the river, to the distance of two or three miles above and below the present erossing place." 'You will transmit to this office, by the first opportunity, and before two or three miles above and below the present crossing place." "You will transmit to this office, by the first opportunity, and before leaving the ground, a plan of your work, accompanied by a descriptive memoir, representing what parts of the country in that neighbourhood are mountainous or hilly, and what are level; whether the hills are steep and broken by rocks, or if they rise by gradual and easy slopes; or if they rise by gradual and easy slopes; or if they round is undusted only in gentle swells; whether the connexion of the high grounds is obvious and continued, or if the height appear detached from each other; in what direction the ridges run, and which is their steepest side." "What is the nature and extent of the valleys, where they originate, and their steepest side.

Note they originate, and extent of the valleys, where they originate, and they run." "What is the what direction they run. "What is the sture of the soil." 2nd. The direction of urne of the river at the crossing place alluded to; whether it is rapid or other-its breadth and depth, and what variations it appears to be subject to at different seasons of the year; the nature of its channel and of its banks, whether rocky, gravelly, sandy, or muddy; of easy or of difficult access; whether fordable at any point within the range of your survey, and if so the nature of the fords—whether always passable or at certain times and seasons only. You will report particularly upon the ferry at present established by Mr. Broderipp, its breadth, and the nature of the landing place on each side, how many men, horses, or carriages the punt is capable of conveying; how much time the passage requires, and in what manner it is performed, whether by hawser, by oars, or by pole. If there be marshes in the neighbourhood you will report their situation and extent, and whether they continue throughout the year or exist only during the wet season. 3rd. As it appears that some improvements have been effected on the ground near the punt, it is desirable to have a description of the improvements—if by buildings, the number of them and of their inhabit. should have been made on its own authority and after its own fashion, it is rather too bad to come forward now, when the selection is proved to have been a calamitous blunder, with an attempt to absolve the official survey from all responsibility, and to cast the whole burthen upon the private selection !

We have inserted at full length the fore-

The official engagements of the ACTING

Strvkvor-General were, in effect, the engagements of the Sovereign; and as such, became binding on Sir George from the moment of his inauguration. But

Captain Perry tells us, that His Excel-

LENCY became bound not only in this in-ferential sense, but by his own deliberate ratification of the Acting Surveyor-Ge-NFR/1's procedure. His Excellency is s. 4to have "marked the plan (of the Gundagai township) as approved, after it had been laid before the Council."

This fact settles the question at once

The plan became not only an act of Go

The other statement requiring notice, is the one put forth in the concluding paragraph . The purchasers of allot-ments selected for themselves, and upon a fact unknown to us when we wrote the article of Wednesday. How far it is applicable to the whole body of pur and to Mr. HUTCHINSON'S "establish-ment," we are at present not informed. The probability is, that it applies to no more than some two or three of the origi-

" pioneers of the wilderness," other occupants having purchased after the township had become officially recognised.

But the point is not material. It is evident from the above letter of instructions, that the selection of private individuals, " upon their own knowledge of the country," was not considered by the Government to be sufficient evidence of the fitness of the tainous or hilly, and what are level - whether the hills are steep and broken by rocks, or if they rise by gradual and easy slopes—or if the ground is undu-lated only by gentle swells, &c., &c.; the direction of the course of the river at the crossing place-whether it is rapid or otherwise—its breadth and depth—and what variations it appears to be subject to at different seasons of the year,' &c.

The report of the official survey made under these elaborately minute instruc-viduals " upon their own knowledge of the country," was the ground-work upon which the Government, first by the commendation of the acting head of the Survey Department, and finally by the approval" of the Governor in Council, adopted Gundagai as the site of a township, and sold its allotments in that character. Aware that private adventurers have little leisure and less qualification for the task of surveying scientifically the country in which they are toiling for bread, the Government, very properly, declined to act upon the selec-tion of such persons. The official selection was therefore made from official data and from those alone. The Government thus became responsible for the eligibility of the selection. And after having at the outset repudiated the private selection, and refused to sell allotments until a selection

With all deference to Captain PERRY who certainly shines much better as an officer than as a logician, we must say that we think he has made the Governmen side of the case no better than it was His effort at a justification of the Gover NOR's decision is about as unlucky as the selection of Gundagai. ground near the punt, it is desirable to have a description of the improvements—if by build-ings, the number of them, and of their inhabit-ants—as well as a description of the enclosures, whether small or extensive; whether any part of the ground has been cultivated, and what is the cultivation, whether wheat, maize, barley, or potatoes. If there are any standing crops, what is their appearance, with reference to the quality of the soil. Since we wrote the above, we have received the following supplementary communication from Captain PERRY :-

munication from Captain Perry.

Sydney, 14th February, 1845.

Gentlemen,—There are one or two circumstances connected with the long-protracted discussions on the subject of Gundagai which I of the following the limits of Gundagai which I of yesterday. The first is, the distance of the place beyond the limits of the proclaimed counties (about sixty miles), and that the exceptions to the existing regulations for the sale of land were made in favour of those persons who had previously established themselves upon the land, and had erected buildings and enclosures for the accommodation of travellers and their cattle, and not with any supposed advantage to the Government as regarded the revenue to be derived from the sale of a few building allotments. Another circumstance, and which bears upon and confirms the above, is that upon the public plan of the town, in the Surveyor-General's office, there is a memorandum in pencil, to the following effect:—

"The sections coloured are those proposed to be put up for sale immediately; those on the road to the ford will probably be all laken up. The detached sections are to afford Mr. Broderipp an opportunity of purchasing the ground on which he has already established himself."

The selection of the ground was therefore indicated by the occupancy above referred to. "Deputy Surveyor-General"
Now it is very clear from the above extracts, that Sir George Gipps, who arrived here in February, 1828, could have nothing to do with arrangements that were made in January, and the fact is, that he merely marked the plan as approved—after it had been laid before the Council, and without considering whether Gundagai was in New South Wales or in the moon; but the purchasers of allotments selected for has already established himself."

The selection of the ground was therefore indicated by the occupancy above referred to, and I have always understood that where a great road crosses a river, whether by bridge, ferry, or ford, is a situation that is generally regarded us convenient for a town, provided there be nothing in the nature of the banks to render such situation objectionable.

there be nothing in the nature of the banks to render such situation objectionable.

Without considering me in the light of a champion of Sir George Gipps, with respect to an expression which appears to have given general umbrage, but as only defending my own conduct during the time the Surveyor-General's department was under my direction, you are authorised to exercise your own discretion as to the use you may make of this cretion as to the use you may make of this first is, "that Sir GEORGE GIPPS had nothing whatever to do with the laying out of that town (Gundagai), the whole arrangement to the contrary of this having been asserted either by our correspondents eretion as to the use you may make of this communication. We do not see how this second letter can be said to mend the matter any more than the first. We are glad, however, to George's arrival, the sufferers can have find that even the DEPLTY SURVEYOR-GENERAL declines the honour of being considered "the champion of Sir George inference. The a t of Captain PERRY was GIPPS with respect to an expression which appears to have given general umbrage." His Excellency's decision does not prosideration of those special circumstances said to have been connected with the selection of Gundagai. On the contrary t assigns no ground but that one sweeping ndiscriminate doctrine, "that what man buys, he buys for better or worse;" a doctrine which we have shown to be contrary to the transactions of every-day life, and monstrously untenable in its application to the present case.

teay, my conduct towards them has been only that which their own demeanour entitled them to expect.

"The kindness, the attention, the respect, which I have invariably experienced from them, can never be effaced from my memory, and I am happy to say, that during the whole period I had the honour of presiding in this Court, the harmony which should exist between the Bench and the Bar has never been in the slightest degree interrupted. My position as sole Judge in a young colony which was struggling at the time of my arrival with the severest commercial distress, would have been one of overwhelming anxiety, if I had not had the good fortune to be assisted by a Bar, who united with the high and honourable feelings of gentlemen, learning, industry, and ability, in the discharge of their professional duties.

"I thank that Bar for their assistance upon every occasion: I thank them for their uniform courtesy and kindness: I thank them for this public expression of their approbation of my conduct: and I beg to assure them, that in whatever situation I may be hereafter placed, I will endeavour to prove myself not unworthy of that favourable opinion which they have this day expressed in such flattering terms. I part from the Port Philip Bar with sincere regret, and I will retain to the last moment of my existence, the most cordial recollection of all their kindness, both in their pro-ment of my existence, the most cordial recol-lection of all their kindness, both in their prodecino of all their kindness, both in their pro-fessional capacity, and as private friends.

"And now, gentlemen, I bid you farewell:
my best wishes will ever attend you."
His Honor was deeply affected in delivering the concluding lines, and we do not think he could have uttered another word.

The farewell dinner to Mr. JEFFCOTT took place on the 6th instant; but our papers do not contain any reports of the LAW INTELLIGENCE.

Mr. Winderen, on the part of the above-named lefendant, moved upon notice for leave to amend the plea, by inserting in the margin thereof a reference to the statute under which the defendant alleged that he had acted. The action was one of a tenant against a landlord for trespass, and a similar order having been made by Mr. Justice Dickinson in the case of Palmer r. the Sheiff, upon the ground that the necessity for amendment arose solely through inadvertence, it was submitted that as an affidavit to the same effect was produced in the present case, the application must be acceded to. Mr. Windever, on the part of the plaintiff, contended that the Jury having been sworn, the defendant must either appear and contest the case or refrain from appearing at all. If he appeared, the objection of his learned friend was irregular, after his having passively allowed the swearing of the Jury; and if, on the other hand, there was no appearance for the defendant, it was competent to the plaintiff to go on, leaving the other side to take advantage at the proper time of any irregularity that might appear to have existed.

After some further argument, the record was brought into Court, from which it appeared that no similiter had been filed as required by the rule of Court, and that the case could not therefore be considered as at issue.

This was an action of assault brought by William Moir against Thomas Ryan. The declaration stated, that on the 12th of December last, the defendant had assaulted the plaintiff by throwing a tumbler at him, thereby inflicting upon the said plaintiff great personal injury. The damages were laid at £500. The plea was, that the defendant was not guilty of the trespass set forth in the declaration.

Messrs Winderes and Michie appeared for the plaintiff; and the Attronspread and the plaintiff; and the ATTORNEY-GENERAL and Mr. DARVALL for the defence.

The pleadings having been opened by Mr.

Mr. WINDEYER proceeded to detail briefly the circumstances of the case, dwelling with much force upon the outrageous nature of the assault which he believed he should be in a position to prove; and the necessity of award-ng heavy damages, both as compensation to the plaintiff for the extreme injury which he in violence; for if such acts were permitted in

The learned gentlemen concluded by calling Mr. Thomas Petty, proprietor of Petty's Hotel, Church-hill, who deposed that on the evening of the 12th December last, there was a dinner given at his house by the senior members of the City Council to those who had been duly elected. Forty-two persons sat down to dinner, which was terminated at a little after twelve o clock, when the Chairman and many of the members left: Mr. Moir was about to depart, when, upon being called back to sing a song, he remained: about twenty persons were of the members left; Mr. Moir was about to depart, when, upon being called back to sing a song, he remained; about twenty persons were sitting in the coffee room, or standing in the verandah. In consequence of something witness heard, he afterwards went into the room, and saw Mr. Moir bleeding very profusely from a wound on the temple; his clothes were completely saturated with blood; and witness having taken him up stairs, cleaned him as well as he could, and sent for Dr. Hosking. Pieces of a tumbler were scattered about the room; but only one glass had been broken on the occasion, and the tumbler produced was one of the same set.

By the Attorner-General: About seven dozen of wine was paid for, but was not all drunk; the liquors actually drank being principally light wines. It was about half an hour after the Chairman had left, that witness saw Mr. Moir bleeding. Two bottles of brandy Mr. Moir bleeding.

John Rose Holden, City Councillor, was resent at the dinner spoken of by the last ritness, when about fifteen or sixteen remained, witness, when about lifteen or sixteen remained, after the chair had been vacated by the Mayor, Mr. Ryan and Mr. Moir were both among this number. Mr. Alderman Wilshire took the chair among those who remained. There was some singing, and Mr. Poole having been requested to sing, pleaded inability, when Mr. Moir agreed to sing for him. Mr. Ryan was sitting on the same side of the table near Mr. Moir. The latter sang a Scotch song, called "Kate Dalrymple," which was much applauded, and at the conclusion of the third stanza, witness saw Mr. Ryan in the act of throwing a tumbler at Mr. Moir. The tumbler struck Mr. Moir full in the temple, where it broke, and witness picked a part of it afterwards from the flesh. All present were paralysed at the moment; but scarcely a moment broke, and witness pieced a part of it areriwards from the flesh. All present were paralysed at the moment, but scarcely a moment had elapsed when M:. Moir rose up and laid hold of Mr. Hyan. Mr. Wilkie, who was present, interposed between them; but Mr. Moir said he was not going to strike the defendant, and called upon Alderman at first hesitated, and Mr. Miles, the Commissioner of Police, was appealed to; but he declined acting on account of Alderman at Wilhire having been present, and having actually seen the assault. The alderman then ordered the defendant into custody, and witness assisted to remove him from the room. Mr. Moir's features were perfectly undistinguishable from the effects of the blood, and his clothes were saturated with it. Mr. Moir was perfectly

By Mr. MICHIE: While Mr. Moir was singing, defendant was regarding him very attentively, and it was while doing this that he allowed the liquor to spill from the tumbler; Mr. Ryan's appearance was very wild, but witness could not say whether or not he knew what he was about.

This closed the plaintiff's case.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL said, that the plaintiff's case having been gone through, he was instructed by his client to say that even now he was ready to make any reparation or apology that could be reasonably expected.

Mr. WINDEYER said, that after the line of conduct which the defendant had adopted, and the nature of the correspondence which had taken place, the only compromise which in justice to his client he could accede to, would be for the defendant to atone for his conduct

The Attorner-General, then proceeded to address the Jury, remarking that it was to be regretted, both for the interests of the parties concerned and of society in general, that this matter had not been arranged without bringing it before the Court, particularly as the object which the plaintiff professed it was his sole desire to attain might have been as well arrived at by the interference of private friends as by the medium of a public trial. Although the details of this transaction were mixed up with at by the interference of private friends as by the medium of a public trial. Although the details of this transaction were mixed up with those of the civic feast, it had really no connection with the festivities of that occasion; and the lamentable termination of the evening's extertsimment was solely attributable to the fact of so many of the company having thought fit to remain behind, and to indulge in their exhilirating amusement until an advanced hour in the morning. It appeared from the evidence which had been already given, that there had been a great quantity of wine drank during the dinner, and Mr. Ryan's principal fault was, that he was not constitutionally able to withstand the overpowering effects of the wine which he had taken; the fact was, that he was totally unconscious of what he was shocked than himself when told on the following day, of what had taken place. December 23, 1844.

Sir,—Mr. Moir has put into our hands your letter of the 21st inatant, with a copy of ours to you of the day previous, which reached him under the same enclosure, we have not, however, anything to add to our former communication, except that you will have, until the 27th instant, the opportunity of affording to Mr. Moir the satisfaction already demanded. This, assuredly, is in-communication, except that you will have, until the 37th instant, the opportunity of affording to Mr. Mori the satisfaction already demanded. This, assutedly, is inconsiderable compared with what you must have expected, and perhaps with what would have been insisted on, had you not expressed yourself to the effect that you were willing to make "any concession and reparation within your power which Mr. Mois should require," thus leading him to believe that you had thrown yourself entirely upon his generosity. But, as you have so uncertanoniously shifted your ground, Mr. Moir abandons the terms he has offered you, unless you act upon them, within the time already limited.

We are, Sir,

Thomas Ryan, Esq., City Councillor,

The witness went on to state that he had frequently met the defendant at dinners, and knew him to be a temperate man. At the dinner in question Mr. Ryan became intoxicated before the dinner itself was over.

By Mr. Windeyer: The copy of Mr. Ryan's first letter was made by witness, the original having been written by Mr. Ryan himself; but the copy of the second letter was in Mr. Ryan's handwriting.

William Thurlow, City Councillor, was at the dinner in question, and saw both the plaintiff and defendant there; believed the latter to have been perfectly unsound in mind as far as liquor could make him so; could not say whether in throwing the tumbler the defendant had taken aim at any person or not. After the tumbler was thrown, defendant retained his seat, appearing to be very stupid, and did not at all recover himself up to the time of his being removed from the room.

Charles Jenkins, City Councillor, was present at the civic dinner alluded to, and had observed in Mr. Ryan's yoice during the dinner that the dinner alluded to, and had observed in Mr. Ryan's yoice during the dinner that dinner in a meaning that the evice during the dinner in the civic dinner alluded to, and had observed in Mr. Ryan's yoice during the dinner that they had seen alluded to, and had been altogether misstructed, and t

Charles Jenkins, City Councillor, was present at the civic damer alluded to, and had observed in Mr. Ryan's voice during the dinner that kind of screaming tone indicative of intoxication; after the tumbler was thrown Mr. Ryan was in a chair at one corner of the room, with his head hanging down, and apparently stupid from drunkenness; witness afterwards saw Mr. Ryan at the watch-house lying on the floor dead drunk, and assisted to put him in the carriage for the purpose of conveying him home after he had been bailed; this was about two hours and a half after the assault.

John Price: Was in charge of the receiving station-house on the morning in question when the defendant was brought there in custody; he was quite insensible, and remained in the same condition until he was bailed out, about three or four hours afterwards; the defendant was brought in upon the charge of being drunk and assaulting Mr. Broadbrust for the defendant was brought in upon the charge of being drunk and assaulting Mr. Miso afterwards sat the defendant was brought in upon the charge of being drunk and assaulting Mr. Miso afterwards so the being drunk and assaulting Mr. Broadbrust for the defendant was brought in upon the charge of being drunk and assaulting Mr. Miso afterwards so the being drunk and assaulting Mr. Miso afterwards so the being drunk and assaulting Mr. Broadbrust for the defendant was brought there in custody; the was quite insensible, and remained in the same condition until he was bailed out, about three or four hours afterwards; the defendant was brought the charge of being drunk and assaulting Mr. Broadbrust for the defendant was brought there in custody; the was quite insensible, and remained in the same condition until he was bailed out, about three or four hours afterwards; the defendant in the same condition until he was bailed out, about three or four hours afterwards are the contract of the par

I do assure you, that until was told the next day by one of the Councillors, I was quite ignorant of what had occurred, and even at this moment I have not the slightest recollection of it. In saying so, I feel persuaded you will acquit me of any institutional or bad feeling towards you, which I solemany declare I never entertained, to the truth of which I call God to witness. In conclusion permit me to add, that I am willing to make to you any other concession and reparation within unp power, which you may require at my hands.

William Moir, Esq., City Surveyor.
Witness read this letter to Mr. Moir, who said that he had no reason to doubt the sincerity of Mr. Ryan's regret, and as far as he was concerned he did not wish to press the matter any further, but intimated that he would send the letter being confidential ought not to be sent to the attorneys, Messrs. Stenhouse and Hardy. Witness afterwards wrote to Mr. Moir, at Mr. Ryan's request, but thad no further interview upon the subject. The letter produced was signed by Messrs. It was admitted that the first letter of the defendant was a very proper one, but on the other hand, although he had expressed himself ready to make the most ample reparation, he had refused to comply with the offer made to him on the part of the plaintiff. His Honor then proceeded to refer briefly to the evidence, leaving the Jury to form their own conclusion upon it with reference to the amount of damages which ought to be awarded as a compensation to the plaintiff for the injury and insult which he had sustained.

The Jury, after having retired for five minutes, found a verdict for the plaintis— damages, £50.

The making of the cart to the defender's order was proved; and on the other hand it was shown that the defendant's horse having been seen in the possession of the plaintiff Tidyman, the latter had spoken of its purchase in such a manner as to lead to the belief that the cart was to go as part payment for the horse. A witness however was called, named Talbot, who stated that he drew up a receipt in defendant's name for the purchase-money of the horse, which he understood to have been given as a satisfaction of a previous loan from the plaintiff to the defendant.

THE WOOL MARKET.

The General Reset bringing the conclusion of the October sales, and the state of the market up to the end of the month, has caused a declension in price on all low descriptions to the extent of 7½ per cent, while the better sorts remain at from 1s. 3d. to 1s. 4d., but do not find a very ready market. chasers from being over anxious to accumulate a stock.

There has been an immense quantity of wet wool received during the week, and it is necessary that the bales should be well examined before shipping, which can only be done by opening them, as the carriers invariably dry them outside before they reach Sydney. The accidents that have occurred should be sufficient warning to the cartains and owners to be careful in eases where sent direct from the interior.

The market having fallen in London, and more goods arriving here, has effected the exchange, and 5 per cent. discount is readily given for advances against wools, being an improvement of 2½ per cent. during the last six weeks.
